The proposal, which is subject acceptance by the stockholders of St. Martin's Property, represents a continuing effort to find productive investments in the West for the rapidly growing accumulation of Arab funds arising from the quadrupling of oil prices in the last 10 months,

Iranian Purchase Economists believe a major part of the funds being amassed by oil-producing nations must in-evitably flow into Western business and industry. Less than two months ago, Iran bought about 25 per cent of Fried Krupp Hnettenwerke AG, a major West German steel-producing company, reportedly for about $100 million. It was believed to be the first purchase by an oil-producing country of a major stake in a industrial enterprise. The oil states have made smaller investments mainly in real estate. Sources close to Mr. Clerides said after today's houriong private meeting that the President had carried no agenda into the session and did not tell some of his most trusted assistants what would be discussed, if anything, beyond the humanitarian questions, there were several proposals "in the air" that might lead to progress toward formal negotiations. One reportedly was for a token reduction of the 40,000 Turkish troops on the island.

Another, the diplomats said, was that the Turkish side give Mr. Clerides private assurance that a small number of Greek Cypriot refugees would be allowed to return to their homes in the area now controlled by Turkish troops. The place most often suggested for the return, the diplomats said is Famagusta a resort city on the eastern coast of the island.

The diplomats said that, in order to win these concessions Mr. Clerides presumably would have to agree that the Greek Cypriots would eventually approve the division of Cyprus into two federated republic.

NICOSIA, Sept. 6 (NYT).— President Glafkos Clerides and Rauf Denktash, the head of the Turkish-Cypriot administration, met privately tonight for the first time since the Geneva conference on the Cyprus crisis collapsed more than three weeks

Mr. Clerides, the leader of the Greek-Cypriot community on the island, and Mr. Denktash were said to have had "a private exchange of views on refugee probms and other important issues." Their meeting, held after a three-hour session attended by the two leaders and other officials, stirred speculation that some movement toward new political negotiations might be starting. The larger meeting, at which the participants included Luis Weckmann Munoz, a special representative of UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim, produced an agreement between the two Cypriot leaders to exchange lists of prisoners and missing persons and to establish a plan for the release of prisoners and detained

Visitors Say Chou Is Back In Hospital

PEKING, Sept. 6 (Reuters).— Premier Choa En-lai, who has been suffering from a heart ailment for the last four months, has returned to a hospital and is too ill to receive foreign visitors, American and West German delegations here said to-

The illness of the 76-year-old Premier, the country's top administrator and the man who presided over China's détente with the United States, Japan and other non-Communist countries, mevitably raised speculation about whether he will ever resume full duties

Sen. Hubert Humphrey, D-Minn., who is here with a U.S. congressional delegation said Chinese officials had indicated that the Premier's condition had worsened recently.

And a West German group, led by opposition leader Helmut Kohi was told Mr. Chou had overstrained himself during a public appearance July 31, at a reception marking China's Army Day.

West German sources said Mr. Kohl had been told the Premier was to ill to meet him

Sen William Fulbright, D-Ark., speaking along with Sen, Humphrey to reporters at a reception held at the American Linison Office, confirmed that the Premier was too ill to receive visitors but added: "No one said he was gravely ill to me."

(Sen. Humphrey, reached by the Associated Press, said, "The vice-premier told us Chou's condition was worse than it was when Sen, Jackson saw him, This was why the Premier was unable to see us. This was a fact but it didn't mean that his condition was critical or that it had bases in Greece. But he acknowledged that "a wave of anti-Americanism" had spread acrose Greece. "It is up to the government of the United States to remove the factors that make us feel the way we do about the United States," he said. The thrust of Mr. Mayros's visit here—which will be followed after tomorrow's trip to Geneva by calls in Bonn and Brussels-was to move Greece further away from the United States and closer to the Common Market countries. When asked whether Greece was "flirting" with the Soviet Union, Mr. Mayros replied: "The fact that Greece has pulled out of NATO does not signify that we are a nonaligned power, nor that we have changed the orientation of our policies. We want to have good relations with all our neighhors, even the Soviet bloc." "But Greece remains European," he said. "That is a fact. We belong to Europe and we for European integration." Mr. Mayros labeled as "unacceptable and dangerous" the dependence of European security on "entente between the superpowers which is founded on the balance of terror." France, which currently holds the rotating presidency of the Common Market, has sided with Greece in its confrontation with Turkey over Cyprus. The French have been pressing for a unified Common Market policy on Cyprus and want the bloc to have a role in any Cyprus settlement. Mr. Mavros said he was counting on France to help Greece in its efforts to join the EEC. "France plays a capital role in Europe," he said. "And naturally she can help in this respect. The will exists and I am optimistic." But he indicated that he thought it would take three or four years for Greece to move from an associate member of the Common Market to full membership. The Greek Foreign Minister said that he and Mr. Giscard d'Estaing had discussed France's promise to sell Greece 50 Mirage fighters, but declined to give details

Europe's 'Sugar Crisis' Stirs Cries Against EEC Policies

By Douglas Ramsey

BRUSSELS, Sept. 6 (WP),-"Finding it hard to buy sugar, Madam?" questioned the lead editorial in a mass-circulation daily in Britain recently. "Blame it on the madcap schemes thought up in the Common Market."

World sugar shortages and rocketing prices are causing a . stir everywhere, but nowhere has the reaction been as hostile as in the European Economic Community.

EEC officials will come to their own defense next week with proposals aimed at reassuring the European consumer of adequate supplies in the future at reasonable, although increasing, prices,

Despite panic buying throughnut the nine-member EEC, government officials and sugarcompany sources deny that a real shortage exists on the Continent, The scare began in Britain in early summer and has spread to the rest of Europe, they say, even though real shortages are only predicted for Britain.

This summer, British shops voluntarily rationed their sales and are still doing so in many parts of the country. The supply situation is being squeezed by a fall in home production as well as foreign imports. Supplies from the Commonwealth cane produc-ers are down an estimated 300,000 tons and the sugar-beet harvest in Britain will mean a 200,000-ton drop in production, according to British Sugar Corporation sources, Caribbean Suppliers

High-level sources at the Common Market here indicate that Jamaica and several other Caribbean suppliers may stop their exports to the EEC next year. A Jamaican spokesman here "categorically" denied any such plans are being made but added that unless the EEC can offer a high enough contract in return for a supply guarantee, Jamaica is better off selling on the American market.

very real shortage in Britain forced the government last month to dip into emergency stocks and place them on the market. Now London is looking to the Commonwealth south of the equator for additional belo. Secret negotiations are reportedly under way in London with Australian authorities to concinde a five-year supply con-tract which would guarantee the stocks last," he said.

300,000 tons of supplies yearly from Jan, 1. Australia has reportedly asked for a price more than four times higher than the going rate on its present exports to Britain.

Meanwhile, to tide the country over until next year, Britain is seeking to purchase 200,000 tons of sugar from Australia for delivery in December and January, according to high sources here. But Australian suppliers have made it clear that the British consumer will have to pay the price for guaranteed supplies.

Go-It-Alone Policy Britain'e avowed readiness to pursue a go-it-alone policy clearly irks officials here in Brussels. The EEC Executive Commission is about to unveil proposals for regulating the European sugar market from 1975 on, including support prices that would encourage beet growers to produce well beyond EEC needs. The proposals will reverse a two-year-old stance here that European production should be dampened to let developing countries take a higger share of the European market.

Meanwhile, supermarkets on the Continent supplied with locally produced beet sugar are replenishing their stocks at a breakueck

Last week, the leader of France's influential sugar-beet industry went on nationwide radio to warn housewives to "stock up on sugar" for the next two months. Blasting an earlier scheme devised by EEC officials to control European sugar output and import more Carlbbean sugar. Henri Cavre said EEC officials had "created the shortage when they should have organized abundance."

Sugar experts at Common Market headquarters in this city react violently to this criticism. One of them said: "These are scare tactics by the beet growers to pressure for bigger subsidies under the long-term proposals near completion. Wholesalers in France and Belgium seem to agree that Mr. Cayre's claims constitute scare tactics. A spokesman at Générale Sucrière, one of France's leading distributors, said that stocks were at normal levels until recently. "But unless this panic buying stops, we'll have to slow down

France Invites EEC Leaders To Pre-Summit on Summit

(Continued from Page 1) That exclusion, coupled with Mr. Schmidt's attack on the commission yesterday as being a "vastly inflated" bureaucracy, is a clear indication that the French and German leaders were concerned with strengthening tha decision-making apparatus of the Council of Ministers at the expense of the supranational executive that is the commission. U.S.-Soviet Pact on Jews Expecial

By Robert C. Toth MOSCOW, Sept. 6.—Jewish dissidents here, on the back of news sinuggled in from the United States, expect a Soviet-American agreement next week that would facilitate large-scale emigration

According to Jewish sources, who said such information has been "generally accurate" in the past, the agreement is to be signed by either President Ford or Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and their Soviet counterparts, and then be formally de-posited with the Senate.

In exchange for Boviet concessions on immigration, the Jackson Amendment-proposed by Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash barring U.S. trade concessions to the Soviet Union would be middled to give Mr. Ford authority to provide most-favored-nation (MFN) status and export credits for one

If the Russians fall to live up to the agreement during the test period, the credits and status would be ended, it was said. Jewish dissidents here are in close contact with their supporters in the United States, who in turn are kept abreast of Soviet-American negotiations in Washington on the two-year-old trade-immigration deadlook

Index of Good Faith

No fixed immigration quots will be specified in the agreement, sources said, but 50,000 for the first year has been "suggested as an index of Soviet good faith" and it is expected here that the number will exceed that when the agreement is fully implemented. The Soviet Union does not regard emigration as a right of its citizens, but as a privilege.

About 35,000 Jews emigrated to Israel last year, but the rate is running at about half that level this year. Of the estimated 2.5 million Jews in the Soviet Union. about 120,000 have formally applied for permission to go to Is-the Soviet Union will have made a significant switch in its attitude toward emigration.

Beyond the ideological implications, such a change will ack-nowledge that Western pressure can moderate internal Soviet policies, which may in turn lead to further demands by other national groups like the Volga Germans. It will also dramatize how much the Soviet Union wants Western technological aid

U.S. Team Halts Grain Sur When Russia Curbs Itiner

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6 (WP). -A team of American experts which went to the Soviet Union last month to gather information on the country's 1974 grain crop was called home by the U.S. gov-ernment last week because Moscow rejected most of its travel

According to Richard Bell, deputy assistant secretary of agriculture, the mission of the threemember team was to inspect the spring wheat crop planted in the so-called "new lands" of western Siberia and northern Kazakhstan, which the late Premier Nikits Khrushchev had developed.

However, repeated requests to go deep into those areas were turned down and the team felt the area approved was "not ger-mane," Mr. Bell said. As a result, the Agriculture Department, after getting the approval of the State Department, told the team to come home.

The recall marked a high point of U.S. irritation over continued Soviet secrecy concerning its harvests and crops.

The Boviet Union is by far the world's biggest producer of wheat and grains. The Agriculture Department has estimated this year's crop at 195 million tons. However, unusually wide fluctuations in past Soviet crops have disrupted world markets because of the country's sudden demand for foreign grain to make up a immediate implication of discovery of the ozone effect, like suggested, is to rein-e the effectiveness of nuclear rrence, since a nuclear power ld know that it was perhaps tining the destruction of tkind if it resorted to muclear pons. But in the longer range, us control officials hope that discovery can contribute to rmament by demonstrating self-destructiveness of mucle

i the past, the ozone effect

By John W. Finney was not seriously considered by military planners, who have come to accept the deterrent concept that a nuclear attack would lead to mutual suicide between two nations. But they have never completely dismissed the possibility that a nation might successfully conduct a pre-emptive attack without being destroyed in return. Ozone a form of oxygen with three instead of the two atoms in a molecule—is found in abundance in the lower stratosphere. It forms a protective layer against radiation, absorbing in particular the shortwave, ultraviolet rays which can tear apart protein molecules in plants and animals. In a way not previously under-stood, the heat of atomic explosions produces molecules of nitric oxides, which as they rise with the atomic cloud interreact with and destroy the ozone molecules without being destroyed them-

While there is still some uncertainty about the extent of this interreaction, there is now general agreement within the scientific community that large-scale nuclear explosions could cause con-siderable depletion of the ozone

Mr. Ikle summed up the pre-vailing scientific judgment: "We do not know how much ozone depletion would occur from a large number of nuclear explo-sions—it might be imperceptible, but it also might be almost total. We do not know how long such depletion would last—less than one year or over 10 years.

"And above all, we do not know what this depletion would do to plants, animals and people. Perhaps it would merely increase the hazard of sunburn. Or perhaps it would destroy critical links of the intricate food chain of plants and animals, and thus shatter the ecological structure that permits man to remain alive on this

"All we know is that we do not know."

The Arms Control Agency, according to Mr. Ikle, "stumbled" across its finding about eight months ago in some still secret studies by the Atomic Energy Commission. On the basis of its own unclassified studies, the agency confirmed the existence of the ozone effect, leading to Mr. Ikle's public disclosure.

The Rev. Joseph O'Rourke was dismissed by letter yesterday, according to a statement of the Very Rev. Eamon Taylor, provincial of the New York Province of the Society of Jesus. It removed Father O'Rourke from the order, but not from the priesthood, the Rev. Joseph Novak, assistant to the provincial, said today,

Father O'Rourke baptized the infant in a widely publicized ceremony several weeks after haptism was denied by a local priest because the infant's mother, Carol Morreale, supports freedom of choice on abortion.

The statement on the priest's dismissal said that "many and repeated efforts to communicate with Father O'Rourke personally had been unsuccessful," so notice the dismissal was mailed to him at his Manhattan address.

The Corn Crop and Food Prices

American food policy. Protected neither by our traditional grain surpluses nor by export controls, U.S. markets are now swinging wildly with each successive crop report, rumor and speculative pounce. The most striking current example is the corn crop. sharply reduced by the summer's drought. Since there is no hope of rebuilding U.S. national reserves of corn over the next year, the figures can lead only to the conclusion that the United States needs to begin. developing export controls.

A month ago, exporters had registered commitmente to sell a bit more than 600 million bushels of corn abroad. Since the Agriculture Department had forecast exports of 750 million to 900 million bushels for the coming year, those registrations were no cause for alarm. But the atmosphere changed on Aug. 18, when the new registrations were published. Suddenly the total jumped to 949 million bushe's, significantly above the department's highest estimate—for a crop year that does not even begin until Oct. 1. The Agriculture Department's explanation is that the exporters are writing contracts, sometimes with their own subsidiaries, to protect their positions in case export controls are eventually imposed. No doubt there is a lot to that explanation, but it does not mean quite what the Agriculture Department suggests—that some of these contracts are phony and, if the year goes on without controls, they will be torn up and thrown away. What those contracts really mean is that the exporters are reserving the right to decide, as the year goes on, whether to sell this corn abroad or in the United States, wherever the price is better-or, you might say, wherever the inflation in foodstuffs is running higher. From the exporters' point of view, it is a normal hedging operation. But it indicates that the export registration statistics are meaningless. The department would be a great deal wiser to acknowledge that neither it nor anyone else knows, under the present reporting system, how much of this corn is actually going to go abroad. All we know is that these contracts cover a substantially larger proportion of the crop than the department itself expected a month ago.

The crop, remember, is the one that is being harvested this fall. The United States won't have another until a year from now, and if the United States mismanages it, it is going to have to live with the consequences for a long time. The consequences, incldentally, will run far beyond next year's harvest because nearly all of this corn is fed to animals. When it is in short supply and the price rises, farmers begin cutting back their production of mest, eggs and dairy foods This process is already well under way. Poultry and milk production will drop before the end of this year, the department warned last week, and in 1975 there will be diminished supplies of grain-fed beef, pork and poultry coming to market. Diminished supplies mean, of course, higher prices at the grocery store. Because of the long cycles in breeding and raising animals,

Things are not going well these days for particularly cattle, it is a process that cannot be reversed in one year regardless of the size and quality of the grain crops next summer. This sequence is, of course, the reason why food and agricultural markets work differently from markets in manufactured goods. If an automobile maker's sales drop a bit, he can slow down the assembly lines. He can adjust his production from week to week. But the United States gets only one corn crop a year, and the one that is now overrunning the department's export estimates is the one that is going to have to last us until September, 1975,

The rising anxiety within the Agriculture Department may be accurately measured by its vigorous efforts to get the United States' best customers to promise to buy less than they had been expecting. The Japanese have now agreed to scale down their purchases by 10 per cent. The European Common Market also had said that it would cut back, an inclination that doubtless will be strengthened by the unexpected rise in our grain prices. These pledges from abroad are presented by the administration as a wholesome and constructive alternative to the imposition of controls. But it is necessary to ask whether it would not be better for the United States to control its agricultural exports in an explicit and orderly fashion rather than bouncing from one unanticipated exigency to the next, each one resulting in a new round of emergency appeals to customers overseas.

The concept of agricultural export controls generally meets three kinds of criticism: First, it violates the principle of free trade. Second, it disrupts the United States' commercial relations with its foreign customers. Third, it makes no provision for the poor nations. In response, we readily acknowledge that free trade is generally the soundest rule and the United States should depart from it only under the most urgent necessity. But trade in food is a special case. Particularly in a world in which crops are uncertain and there are no significant reserves anywhere. As for the United States' relations with its foreign customers, they could only be improved by a clear understanding of the United States' export capabilities and intentions. Finally, the present system is devised to maximize the United States' foreign exchange earnings, with no regard to inflation at home or famine abroad. It is this system that has precluded the possibility of substantial American aid this year to the improverished countries.

Export policy may seem a distant and esoteric subject, but the mistakes made here will show up, promptly and inevitably, at the cash register of the neighborhood supermarket. The issue is not whether this fortunate country can neglect its clear moral responsibility to help the rest of the world. Nor is it whether we can neglect the importance of foodstuffs in our balance of trade. It is rather, a matter of stabilizing agricultural markets and preventing the damage that further disruptions promise.

Moscow's Cyprus Maneuvers

Since the coup on July 15, the Soviets have tried every means to use the Cyprus crisis for their own purposes. To start with they backed Makarios and demanded the restoration of the situation as it was "before the Greek military clique intervened." When the Turks landed. Moscow reacted with notable understanding and blamed the Greeks. The collapse of the colonels and the return of Caramanlis seems to have surprised Russia just as much as the overthrow of Makarios had done.

The Soviets were anything but enthusiastic about the Geneva conference and the British efforts at mediation, criticizing the absence of Cypriot representatives at the first round of talks. They rejoiced when the conference broke down and suggested substituting UN mediation. At the same time they declined to give the secretary-general powers that would have enabled him to intervene effectively to keep the peace. Instead, they tried to grasp the initiative by proposing an international conference, and in their eagerness to acquire a say in affairs they seemed to overlook that this might give China similar rights. All in all, Soviet diplomacy seems to have remained at least one jump behind events at every stage.

EEC Agriculture Problems

The root of the problem is that the Community clings to the notion that the common agricultural policy (CAP) genuinely is a common policy—that is, one based on jointly-agreed aims.

In reality it is only a framework for national haggling by governments each of which is defending a different farming industry. Their difficulties in Brussels are magnified by the other community myth, that the CAP is based on a common price system, whereas the arcane contortions of artificial exchange rates and monetary compensation amounts demonstrate the con-

Yet for all its advantages in terms of flexibility-not to mention the electoral benefits it may bring to the Labor partyit would be a grave mistake to imagine that the subsidy road is costless.

Britain already faces the prospect of being the biggest contributor to the community farm fund; subsidies will come on top of that contribution, and will be paid by the British taxpayer, not by the farm fund.

Portugal's New Direction

In Portugal itself the stresses are now severe. New labor laws that require a cooling-off period before strikes have run up against unrest among workers. The junta boldly conscripted striking airport workers. Over the personality of a newspaper editor and a newspaper strike such draconian methods have not been used Nevertheless there are signs of resistance by Portuguese employers to wildcat strikes. Premier Goncalves intends to stand firm on the labor law. This test will show just what sort of Portugal is emerging from the coup.

The White House's Crisis Over Al Haig

By Rowland Evans and Robert Novak

WASHINGTON-An urgent feeling by President Ford's closest aides that Gen. Alexander Haig must be removed as his chief of staff soon—perhaps im-mediately—hit fever pitch in two backstage developments last Thursday, Development No. 1: Haig entered the Oval Office with a commis-sion for Mr. Ford to sign nominating Pat Buchanan, Richard M. Nixon's longtime political adviser and speechwriter, as ambassador to South Africa. Despite Haig's fervent arguments, the President delayed his decision.

Development No. 2: The General Services Administration was instructed by Haig deputy Jerry Jones to move furniture into two Executive Office Building suites next door to the White House for two ex-Nixon sides now in San Clemente: Room 352 for ex-Press Secretary Ron Ziegler, Room 348 for ex-appointments secretary Steve Bull

Buchanan, Ziegler

Mr. Ford's own sides were thunderstruck, They view Buchanan as the symbol of bloody-nose Nixon politicos who undercut Mr. Ford as Vice-President and who now should be removed from government, not promoted to an embassy. As for Ziegler, he is the bad old days incarnate who. they vow, will never be permitted to return to White House premises even to clean up files.

Haig's successes in the vicious rivalry now swirling around the Oval Office have led the thin line of totally loval Ford sides to a grim conclusion, "The White House staff run by Haig is still functioning in the interests of Richard Nixon and the walking wounded of a lost war," one Ford man told us.

That interpretation makes suspect Haig's private recommendation to the new President for leniency to the old. Though their concern for Mr. Ford may distort their view, these aides believe Haig must share responsibility for inaccurate information given Mr. Ford a month ago that Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski had agreed the White House tapes were Nixon's legal property.

If Haig indeed has put Nixon and his former aides above an undivided allegiance to President Ford, it is indefensible. Beyand residual loyalties, he is also playing the politicized general warning of right-wing Republican discontent, fighting the President's position on Vietnam amnesty, undercutting Secretary of Defense James Schlesinger,

Even Haig's roughest critics concede his uniquiy indispensable service to the nation in facilitating Nixon's resignation, thanking heaven it was Al Haig rather than Ron Ziegler to whom Nixon gave unprecedented power. That is why Mr. Ford and his aides publiciy and genuinely praised Haig in the early transition period. But these same aides now insist Haig must go

Having served as de facto president in the final months of Nixon's agmy, Haig continued to wield awesome power-greater than many past presidents—after the Ford succession. In his early days as President, Mr. Ford signed the commission for one presidential appointment given him-Nixon style by Haig with no Ford man even knowing it. That Hair was fulfilling a commitment to his old boss is no excuse,

One incident a month ago convinced some Ford aides that Haig was not in time with the new President's own interests. He failed to warn Mr. Ford that six hidden microphones, though disconnected, remained in the Oval Office, theoretically a potential for bugging the President. They were not removed until a week after Mr. Ford's Aug. 12 pledge there would be no more electronic cavesdropping in the White

On a more trivial level, Haig ignored Mr Ford's desire to replace portraits in the cabinet room of Theodore Roosevelt and Woodrow Wilson (Nixon favorites) with Abraham Lincoln and Harry Truman (Ford favorites) until brought to his attention a third time. Coincidentally, Lincoin and Truman were Mr. Ford's models in post-war amnesty

When Haig learned belatedly oute to Chicago for the Aug. VFW convention that the President would propose amnesty, he protested and prophesied-inaccurately—that the veterans would boo him. Since then, Ford aides charge. Haig has funnelled anti-amnesty sentiment into the Oval Office and overemphasized the strength of protests from the Republican right

They also believe Haig worked up Mr. Ford about Secretary Schlesinger's safeguards against military take-over during the changing of the presidents. They say Haig, indignant over criticism of the military, was the angry one not the President Detailed memos from Haig's staff suggesting what Mr. Ford should say and do every hour of the day, a system built by H. R. Haldeman for Nixon are viewed as "insulting and demeaning" by one Ford insider. These memos reach the President just before an event somehow bypassing veteran Ford aide Robert Hartmann until too

Hartmann and a handful of Ford men symply cannot compete with the Haig system. Thus, they feel President Ford must cut loose Al Haig. "Until that happens," one aide said, "the President will be the Prisoner of Zenda in his own house."

Pan Am—To Subsidize It or Not

been carned only because airlines such as Pan Am exist? Stop for a moment and think of the commerce that has been enhanced because some shrewd pilots-turned-executives recognized a need in this world for people to travel from place to place swiftly, comfortably, and reliably. How many of your reporters can be assured of getting a story—or getting to a newsbreak-because there is a regularly scheduled arliner ready to depart for his destination at a specified hour? And it will depart, too, and get him there as it will get the businessman to his urgent conference or the diplomat to his treaty session.

The fact that all of these people can arrive at their destinations means that many other people (most of them Americans) will gain. As benefactors, this commerce may guarantee that we and thousands of others will be employed for another year, that a contract is signed or an understanding is achieved, or more peace is established in the In our present society a reliable airline is as valuable as a postal system, a news medium, or a telephone network. To allow it to vanish because of an impulsive response to a momentary setback in our national economy would be to send many institutions down an irredeemable path to oblivion. Ultimately our society would suffer much more than it would by creating a climate of government al-industrial understanding. Of course, you might reply that other airlines would step in and perform the same functions possibly more cheaply, maybe more efficiently, and without public tax support.

Perhaps, but won't that substitute sirling be confronted with the same expenses, the same price rises in fuel, the same need to boost salaries?

It is the easier course to simply allow a major carrier that has contributed so much to technology and commerce to collapse merely because we are all screaming that taxes already are too high to recognize that indeed the airline is of real value to us and that all of us must cooperate see that it may have a reasonable opportunity for survival. After all, if it disappears will the U.S. government render the same services to the public that Pan Am presently does? Absolutely not. And if it did, you would witness the boundoggle to best all boundog-

Moreover, one could argue that our government merits some culpability for permitting a situation to fester in which all of our transportation industries are experiencing hardship. If the fuel analysis, politicians, and other watchdogs of our natural resources (and the resources of nations on which we depend) had been doing their jobs, then the present chaotic fuel calamity might have been avoided. Let's not cut off Pan Am's nose nation of the company incredible.

Can anyone begin to calculate I also find the attitude expressed the billions of dollars that have in the editorial and commentary as incredible. Editorial and commentary completely ignore the pasic fact that the reason Pan Am is in serious financial trouble is not because of mismanagement but because of U.S. government decisions that have ruined the company's competitive posture. Let me give you several ex-

Alaska Airlines to survive." 2. In the San Juan-New York (Boston, Washington) market the Civil Aeronautics Board not only certificated first Eastern Air Lines and later Transcaribbean to compete with Pan Am but also. when Transcaribbean got into financial difficulties, permitted American Airlines to buy the Transcaribbean certificate, rather than letting Transcaribbean go into bankruptcy. As a result none of the three competitors on this route makes any profit.

3. Take the U.S.-Hawaii route.

Pan Am pioneered this route in 1935, a great technical achieve-But immediately after World War IL the CAB also certificated United Air Lines to fly to Hawaii United predictably became the dominant carrier in the market because they could offer one carrier service from points in the U.S., a tremendous competi-tive advantage specifically denied to Pan Am. Nevertheless, we were doing well in the market, as was UAL, until the CAB certificated Braniff Western, Con-tinental, American, and TWA on the route also, from points all over the U.S. At the same time Pan Am was again specifically denied such rights. What kind of fair competition was this? There are numerous other examples where the U.S. govern-ment and the State Department has set up both United States and foreign competition to Pan Am to the extent that now it is practically impossible for the company to compete economically. In spite of this, Pan Am after painful reorganization was well on its way to a profitable year in 1973. But then came the fuel crisis with the sudden rise in mel prices to undreamed-of levels, again a circumstance within domain and control of the U.S. soveroment and not of Pan

I ask you, how in the name of sheer decency and justice can the U.S. government turn its back on Pan Am when the basic cause of its plight has been and still is the repeated decisions of government agencies (principally the CAB) to increase competition with Pan Am and at the same time deny Pan Am the operating authority to compete fairly? Subsidy at this time appears to be the only solution temporarily until the previous wrongs can be righted and Pan Am given a

London: Who Is to Blame For Inflation

By James Resto ONDON The British are

ing a debate here these days about who's responsible for inflation. Most of the time, a standard political debate like our own argument at home. The Tories are blaming the socialists, and the socialists are blaming the Tories, and both are blaming the crisis on world prices of oil and other essentials beyond their

But there is a difference here. For while the politicians and economists are dominating the debate, with their talk about union power, Eurodollars and the balance of payments, the British preachers and philosophers are blaming the inflation in large part on the Illusions and assumptions of the people.

The Times of London printed an article by Christopher Der-rick the other day on "the moral problem of inflation," "What is inflation, after all?" he asked. "It's an economist's word for over consumption, for living beyond your income; for taking more out of the kitty than you put in The fact is that we've all... come to take for granted a quite fanciful and unrealistic notion of the standard of living to which we are entitled, as though by divine

Publicly, the British politicians, now facing an election on the inflation issue, don't like this line of thought. In Britain, as in America, putting the blame on the people whose votes you want is not the ideal formula for success. Yet the philosophers, who fortunately do not have to run for office, have a point, and in private the politicians admit it. The politicians are confronted by economic and social demands that are -understandable but in terms of British production and prices, unreasonable. A major change has taken place in British life and maybe in American life. Private purposes are taking precedence over public purposes. Under the pressure of inflation, individual rights and institutional rights are dominating national rights and necessities. The contemporary British experience is a warning to America. The British labor unions today illustrate the point. They were a force for moderation when Hugh Gaitskell was leader of the Labor party. Now, on the whole, they are supporting the extreme de-mands of their left-wing unions.

The labor unions here have their own private sources of power. The miners' pickets have overwhelmed the police and closed the power stations. The British dockers and building workers have used force to get their own way. As the Economist magazine said the other day, these are "private armies" using force to insist on their private ends.

The paradox of all this is that, ctually, the British are writing more common sense about the interdenendence of the modern world the need of the nations for one snother-than almost any other people in the world. Yet politically, they are increasingly provincial and even isolationisi Just when America is finally recognizing the limitations and dangers of "state's rights," the Scottish Nationalists are howling for independence and the oil of the North Sea. Even the Texans, who are helping them bring the oil in, think this is a little silly. Yet this is the way things are going in the modern world. There are separatist movements in Canads, between the English and the French. On the Indian subcontiment, between the Indians and the Pakistania. In Cyprus, between the Greeks and the Turks. In the Middle East, between the Israelis and the Arabs, and even between one Arab state and an-

In the face of all this, the people of the world these days are confused and demoralized. "A demoralized people," Walter Lippman observed, "is one in which the individual has become isolated and is the prey of his own suspicions. He trusts nobody and nothing, not even himself. He believes nothing, except the worst of everybody and everything. He sees only confusion in himself and conspiracies in other men. That is panic. That is disinteeration. That is what comes when in some sudden emergency of their lives men find themselves unsupported by clear convictions that transcend their immediate and personal desires."

This suggests the condition of Britain today, and of most of the Western world. But governments alone are not wholly to blame, "The dominant myth of our society," Christopher Derrick insisted, "is in conflict with the ugly facts." We are expecting too much, he said. Maybe we have to adjust to "a revolution of

Maritime Strike Seen in France

PARIS, Sept. 6 (AP).—A major seamen's union said yesterday that it would call a general strike of all French seamen and hold a sit-in in the transatlantic liner France, if the decision to pull the liner out of service next month is not rescinded.

A government spokesman said earlier that there was "no chance whatsoever" that the liner would be reprieved. It has been costing the state about 100 million francs ($20 million) a year to subsidize the liner.

The seamen's branch of the Communist-led General Confederation of Labor said its planned strike would dramatize the serious state of the French merchant marine in which 20,000 jobs have been lost since 1960,

The white paper said all-men's or all-women's clubs would be ex-empted from the planned antidiscrimination bill. It said schools exclusively for either boys or girls also would be exempted.

Sweden to Free Wennerstroem, Ex-Soviet Agent

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 6 (UPI).-Stig Wennerstroem, the retired Swedish Air Force colonel who as a spy informed Moscow of U.S. plans to blockade Cuba in 1962 and gave NATO information to Kremlin agents, will be released from prison next week, the government said today.

Wennerstroem, 67, has spent more than 10 years in prison. He will be released on probation. He was arrested in 1963, convicted of spying for the Soviet Union and sentenced to life imprisonment. The term was later changed to 20

During 15 years of spying for the Russians, Wennerstroem had held several sensitive positions in the Swedish military, including that of air attache to Moscow and Washington. After his retirement from the air force, he worked as a Foreign Ministry expert on disarmament.

At the time of his arrest, American defense officials said that the information he had given the Russians amounted to leaving NATO's northern flank wide open." He ranked as a major general in the KGB under the code name of "the Eagle."

Wennerstroem is expected to rejoin his family in a Stockholm suburb on Monday, pending completion of the parole arrange-

Police-Linked Killings Virtually Unchecked

Brazil Chief Asks Drive on 'Death Squads'

By Bruce Handler RIO DE JANEIRO, Sept. 6 (WP).-Widespread police brutality, including killings by police linked "death squads," continues virtually unchecked in Brazil, and President Ernesto Geisel has asked for a crackdown,

The issue this time is not the torture of leftist political prisoners, for which Brazil's military regime has been frequently conoverseas, but rather police violence at the local level. President Geisel, 2 retired army general who preaches a stern law-and-order line, annonnced that he was "appalled and shocked" by a recent impromptu execution in the crime-Rio suburb of Nova Iguacu, in which witnesses saw two state policemen line up two teen-aged boys against the wall of a barber shop and kill them with submachine gun and pistol

The President called the slayings "perverse" and demanded rigorous punishment" for the

of the victims, Pedro Paulo da Silva, 17, as a troublemaker and a bully, but hardly a dangerous criminal. The name of the other boy was not known

Nova Iguacu is a stronghold of the "death squad," a vigilante gang of off-duty policemen who summarily execute petty criminals in an effort to "clean up "Death-squad" killers usually tile a victim's hands behind his back shoot him dozens of times and then dump the body on a deserted road. Often they leave a crudely drawn skull and crossbones on the corpse, with the initials EM-Portuguese for "esquadrao da morte," or death squad."

Last year, there were 99 "death squad" elayings in Nova Iguaca. So far this year, the rate has risen to about 15 a month, Since they first appeared in the 1950s, "death squads" in various Brazilian cities have been held responsible for, or proudly have taken credit for, a total of 1,500 to 2,000 killings. Only a handful of "death-squad" murderers— all of them policemen—have been arrested, tried, convicted and sent to prison.

Bomb Scare Delays The Orient Express

BUDAPEST, Sept. 6 (Reuters). -The trans-European Orient Ex-press was halted and searched last night because of a bomb scare, passengers said today. The train was first delayed for 40 minutes in Vienna, where a telephone call about a bomb was received. At the Hungarian border, Hungarian anthorities eventually decided to transfer passengers to another train after s three-hour delay for a further

"The President can try to eliminate this type of police violence, but he wan't succeed," top crime reporter here said. These policemen are like the Mafia. They don't go around wearing badges that say: 'I'm from the "death squad" when they do get caught, they never tell on their friends."

The newsman described "death-squad" gunmen as "cold and calculating-and great shots." He said they are capable of "killing three, four or five times, just as though it were like getting up in the morning and eating breakfast."

"Death-squad" victims usually are muggers, rapists, car thieves and drug pushers—persons the police consider "noxious to so-clety," the reporter said. He said police forces, especially in the tough Rio suburbs, are fed up with what they consider excess leniency in the courts, and take justice into their own hands.

No Respect

Gov. Raimundo Padilha of Rio de Janeiro State has pledged to fire such policemen, who he says "don't have the least respect for human life."

Many Brazilians, including nonviolent policemen and ordina y sitizens, are sympathetic to the "death squads."

A jury in the northeastern state of Bahia acquitted a dismissed policeman, Manoel Quadros, in a murder trial in which he was accused of belonging to a "death squad." Witnesses tes-tified that Mr. Quadros had a reputation as one of the most sadistic policemen in the region.

Mr. Quadros allegedly burned prisoners with cigarettes and liked to chop up dead criminals' bodies with a machaete. He still faces three more murder charges.

U.S. Businessman Recovering From Moscow Stabbing

MOSCOW, Sept. 6 (AP).—An American businessman is reported to be recovering from a deep stab wound inflicted by a mentally disturbed Russian who told police he came to Moscow "to kill an American."

James Hefty, 34-year-old representative of the Philadelphia plastics and chemical firm Rohm and Haas, was standing by his company's exhibit at a trade fair yesterday when a man approached, asked him if he was an American and plunged a scalpel into him.

Mikhail Frolov, the deputy director of the international chemical exhibit at Sokolniki Park, said the assailant was a 29-year-old farm worker named Yuri Kaprov from the Ukrainian village of Cherniegyo.

Mr. Froloy said Kaprov had been given a psychiatric dis-charge from the army in 1965. Kaprov did not try to escape.

Waldheim Says World Is Facing Profound Crisis

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Sept. (NYT). - Secretary - General Kurt Waldheim warned yesterday that profound economic and social problems were threatening the world with a "crisis of extraordinary dimensions."

He pointed to rampant inflation and dwindling food supplies in the context of souring population as immediate problems that had to be solved.

The secretary-general warned that the proliferation of nuclear explosive devices "could create almost unimaginable dangers for the survival of our civilization and the human race."

Mr. Waldheim said that the world's problems were beyond the control of any nation or group but he held out the hope that the UN could meet the challenges.

considerations, Mr. Agnelli said, but also because it was "the will of the majority of the country, which rejects the collectivistic ideology, the ideology of the socalled 'popular democracies' that the Italian Communist party has never disayowed."

The Fiat president spoke in his capacity as president of the General Confederation of Italian Industry, a counterpart of the National Association of Manufacturers in the United States. His statement appeared in an interview with an economic daily. If Sole-Ventiquettro: Ore, of Milan. The warning by the chief of Italy's largest privately owned in-dustrial concern was issued amid a broadening nationwide debate on the status of the Communist party.

Reforms Needed

The party—the strongest Communist movement in the West and Italy's second-largest political force—has for years been de-manding that it be given a share in government power. Commu-nist leaders contended that the vast social reforms that the nation needs could not be enacted without their party's help.

The discussion took a new twist last month when Premier Ma-riano Rumor obtained the Communist party's collaboration to secure passage in parliament of a fiscal austerity program.

Strong Australian Talent

By John Walker

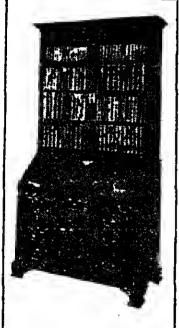

ONDON, Sept. 6 (IHT).—David Williamson's "What If You Died Tomorrow?" at the Comedy Theatre is the first complete Australian production to play London since Ray Lawler's "Summer of the Seventeenth Doll' and testilles to that country's strong, young dramatic talents. It is a comedy, not as funny or as pas-sionate as the anthor's 'The Removalists," produced at the Royal Court last season, but barshly amusing nonetheless.

The subject matter-a young Australian writer trying to cope with sudden success — obviously has a greater fascination for the author than for his audience. In one traumatic evening, Andrew (Shane Porteous) has to cope with his uncomprehending parcots, unexpectedly returned from a tour of Europe ("We found it rather grubby"), with a suicidal youth they met on the voyage, with a running battle between two publishers squabbling over his latest manuscript, exacerbated by the tantrums of his homosexual agent, and with the independent girl aod her rebellious children for whom he has left his wife. This richness of material enables Williamson to build a series of confrontations, between his author and his parents, whose sexual attitudes are poles, or at least a generation, apart, and between the two publishers, one an extrovert entrepreneur, the other a predatory woman who manages an instantaneous seduction of our hero. For much of the evening, Williamson writes an oldfashioned play, with some contrived entrances and exits. But. finally having maneuvered the unlikely seduction so that Andrew can be eaught with his trousers down by most of the household. he refuses to bring the play to any neat resolution.

Robin Lovejoy's direction is perceptive and sharp and there is some good acting, notably from Rnth Crocknell and Ron Haddrick as the parents anxious that their son should be happy and also should live by their standards, and from Max Phipps as the loudmouthed, energetic pub-

What is worse is that it combines tedious whimsy with insufferable condescension. I had thought that the demise of the Living Theater had eoded the fashion for actors to demonstrate. to their own satisfaction, their superiority to their audience. The performers here, after much foreed bonhomie before the show begins, strolling shout the theater to the accompaniment of raucous cries, explain that their intention is to "liberate our genitalia." This is an arrogant assumption, particularly as they then proceed to make fools of themselves on stage, yelling ooe stultifying song after another, each lacking originality or wit, in short displaying an absence of mind to complement the many gyrating bodies

The show's intention, of course. to liberate the audiences' wallets. The stalls seats, at £3.30. are as expensive as any other show in London, ond more expensive than most, for a show that offers a dozen or so barely talented performers. There follows all the possible variations on this one joke, occasionally made amusing by the stylish acting of Jon Pertwee as the husband, Lynda Baron as his wifs and Ronald Culver as a henpecked father-in-law The ending is in keeping with the rest: The wife becomes pregnant so that she can fulfill herself in a properly feminine way and the husband is offered his old joh back at double his former salary, which means that he will be earning even more than she was. Above all, this summer has brought a veritable literary censation, and a home-grown one at that: Elsa Morante's new novel, "La Storia." The first edition of 100,000 was sold out in weeks and the Einsudi publishing house had to rush new printing orders.

For the first time since anyone can remember, people in railroad compartments and espresso bers discuss a book—the Morante novel -rather than the soccer championship or latest scandal

Why Italians Are Reading Agai.

Miss Morante, the 62-year-old after the city's liberatio estranged wife of Alberto Mora-vis, has been tolling on "La Storia" for the last three years, living as a recluse in her little apariment off Rome's Piazza del

Popolo. The author of a few earlier books that were more praised than read, ruch as "Arthur's Island," Miss Morante has for years been cultivating obscurity. She does not belong to any coterie of intellectuals and does not agn manifestos or publicly back in-flammatory causes. Now, apparentily to her immense dislike, sho suddenly finds herself a celebrity, Einaudi and Miss Morante agreed to skip the hard-cover phase and started with a 670-page paperback edition of "La-Storia" costing about $3. The Storia" costing about $3. The writer declared herself satisfied with a 6 per cent royalty instead of the 10 per cent of a volume's sales price customary here, Miss Morante had a story to tell and has told it well. She also stated a few deeply held beliefs.

The story is much more convincing than the philosophical trimmings, elthough the writer seems to have attached great importence to them.

The main characters of "La Storia" are a half-Jewish Venetian-Calabrian schoolteacher; her little son, who was conceived in a rape by a drunker Bavarian soldier from of all places, Da-chau; a half-brother who is hungry for life, and two dogs.

THE ART MARKET

Swiss Fair Chooses To Show Low Profile

By Souren Melikian

Zurich antique dealers fair that opened a week ago and will be closing its doors Sunday has great charm. Its purpose, in sharp contrast with that of the great London and Paris shows. is to please, not to impress.

Fifty-five dealers from all over Switzerland have, for the second year running, laid out some nice pieces of furniture of the homely. sturdy kind, with a sprinkling of objets d'art, many Swiss, but some foreign_

In the Kongresshalle, the dealers have thus provided a fairly good cross-section of what can be found in the homes of the traditional-mined Swiss bourgeoisle. It is refreshingly free from the attempts at Louis XIV-style grandeur that characterizes the Paris fairs held every two years at the Grand Palais or London's Grosvenor House, where an excess of museum rarities can be stifling

The Swiss fair lays stress on furniture: Symbolically the most expensive piece in the whole fair is a sort of huge sideboard incorporating a commonde in the center. Nearly 4 meters long, it looks like a part of a rich farmer's décor in the 18th cen-The price asked, 120,000 Swiss Francs ($40,000), reflected ZURICH, Sept. 6 (IET).—The strong optimism on the wouldbe seller's part. A third of that figure would sound more plausible by French or English standards.

Realistic Prices

On the whole, however, the fair is characterized by prices that are high but realistic-perfectly adjusted to the wealth and temperament of the Zurich citizenry. At the stand of Michel Rigaldo of Lausanne, for instance, an oval walnut-veneered dining table of the seventies or eighties of the last century is price' at 5,500 Swiss francs. Between its two movable halves, seven additional tablets can be inserted. making if fit to accommodate 25

It is quite rare to find 2 dining table that can be extended quite so much. At the Hotel Drouot, Paris, where similar tables the price would probably not be very much lower. Or to take another example, a clock of black marble with ormolu, open-work fittings by Delvills of Geneva, is offered at 3,500 Swiss francs. Were it not for the signature on the dial, it would be impossible to tell the clock from a Parislan piece made around 1798-1800. Indeed Violette Blanc-Rigaldo, an associate of her brother Michel Rigaldo, points out that the bronzes may well have been imported from Paris. This makes a comparison with the Paris market particularly apt. A French piece of that type would oscillate between 2,500 and 5,000 French francs. Being Swiss, the piece is rarer, and therefore not

A very fine wardrobe with strongly moulded doors and handsome cornice, in walnut veneer, 211 centimeters high, and priced at 21,000 Swiss francs, considered typical of late 17th-century Zurich, is directly derived from models first designed by German cabinet makers in Frankfurt. By the late 18th century, French influence swayed as far as Bern: A coiffeuse (dressing table) from Bern displayed by Rigaldo is French in shape, a sort of simple version of the Louis-XIV manner.

Objects are notably scarcer at the Zurich fair. For those who do not care for cuckoo clocks and music boxes, the choice is limited. There is a good bronze panther by Rembrandt Bugatti about 20 centimeters long, priced at 22,000 Swiss francs, about 50 per cent over the price that it might be offered at in Paris: George Charbonnier of Geneva has the most original selection. There is an extremely good bronze by Barrezu, of the late 19th century. It is impressionistic in style and not unlike Dalou's work. Interesting, too, is a selec-tion of Russian objects. A nice cup in silver gilt, stamped with the mark of Fodor Petrov of Mos-cow, was made in 1761 in imitation of German work of an earlier period. The 304-gram piece is priced at 15,000 Swiss francs.

The most interesting work, however, also displayed by Bieli among his assortment of Swiss furniture, is a fight scene by Albert Delrive, an obscure French Every now and then highly, painter active in the late 18th century. The picture shows German hussars in Prussian costume charging. It is intended, according to Josef Biell, to illustrate the 30 Years' War and has a strange, baroque violence about it. The public has been sluggish.

All the dealers who were at last year's fair, the first to be held, agree that the going has been much harder. On the whole, furniture, because it is utilitarian has held its own. Objects have been hardest hit. The dealers questioned stressed that they did not feel any lack of hard cash was making itself felt. There is plenty of money around in Zurich and when pieces of furniture do appeal to a Zuricher he will disburse fairly large sums.

The clientele for pieces of the kind displayed at the Kongresshalle is not with a few exceptions, much affected by industrial problems or the fall of stocks. It consists of members of profeswhose incomes remain stable. Last year one might have deplored the paucity of top-quality pieces at a fair held in a city otherwise noted for its splendid museums. This year one feels obliged to applicat the unintentional or unconscious modesty of the participants A low profile is the key to survival if

Wendy Hall is a young English artist whose reputation has hitherto rested ou her book illustrations. In this, her first London one-man show, she dsplays new spects of her art-in a series of large oils, of figures in stormclouded and densely wooded backgrounds; and in some fine large pen and crayen drawings of trees, inspired by the English countryside. Both paintings and drawings are very assured and satisfying.

Leonardo painted the original smiling girl in 1504. Inspired by her, some 30 contemporary painters and soulptors present modern versions on the eternal theme. These range from Saskia de Boer's self-assured and unsmiling moppet, and Ludmil Siskov's Moto Lisa" a pinup in a damp and clinging minidress astride a motorcycle, to Terry Pastor's vampire Lisa (entitled "That Certain Smile"). Graham Dean's "Mona and Leo" (artist and model together in hed), and Wunderlich's fearsome selfportrait, "Self as Liss."

'1600 Pennsylvania Avenue'

Bernstein, Lerner Plan Bicentennial Musica

By Don Oberdorfer TOKYO, Sept. 6 (WP).—Leo-nard Bernstein said today that he and Alan Jay Lerner have something special cooking to celebrate America's bicentennial next summer-a Broadway musical depicting 19th-century American life as seen by blacks in the White House kitchen. Tentatively titled "1600 Pennsylvania Avenue," the collabora-tion by composer Bernstein ("West Side Story" and others) and lyricist-playwright Lerner ("My Fair Lady" and others) has been bandled about in theater circles for months. In an expansive mood during a Tokyo concert tour, the composer-con-ductor-planist told a bit more about it than in the past.

"We've never collaborated before, though Alan is a dear and old friend of mine, and we've been talking about this now for two years. The subject is the White House from 1800 to 1900, from the time it was built for John Adams until the time it acquired its name under Teddy Roosevelt, All of this century is seen from the kitchen through the eyes of four generations of blacks, who have been the only consistent inhabitants of that house," he said . . .

Calling the theme "an idea that fascinates me," Bernstein said he and Lerner are selecting 19th-century events which are particularly related to the White House kitchen help, such as the Civil War, Emancipation Proclamation, the impeachment of President Andrew Johnson and so on, "There is a very loteresting dramatic straight line from 1800 to 1900, without meaning to draw any present-day analogies or concert tour with the New York Philharmonic and other commit-ments, work on "1600 Pennaylvania Avenue," has been proceeding slowly. "Alan's back in New York chewing his nails, but we hope to have it finished this winter." As currently planned, the musical should hit the boards next spring: ..

Dismal Performance by the 'Dismal Science'

NEW YORK, Sept. 6 (AP-DJ).-Just as U.S. economists are finding they do not have all the answers to the current inflationary surge, they are also discovering that proliferating economic woes are forcing them to alter several of their academic principles.

For instance, the Phillips Curve, which postulates a fixed trade-off between rates of inflation and unemployment, has been shown wanting by the current "stagilation," or inflationary recession, which shows that unemployment and inflation can grow simultaneously.

"No one today holds the naive notion of a fixed curve," says Milton Friedman of the University of Chicago. A Princeton University economics instructor, James Litvack, agrees. "It's a lot more complicated than we econ-omists thought," he says.

That seems true for the whole economy, not just for one formula. In the halcyon days under the Kennedy and Johnson administrations, economists were widely credited with almost un-were whosey credited with almost un-canny powers to "fine-time" the econ-ony. But no more. Professor Paul Samuelson, the Nobel laureate who teaches economics at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, says that economists' "complacency with rest of the world onling and shing in admiration" for their presumed ex-

Now, however, the heavily Keynesian "new economics" stressed then is criticised as depression-oriented and thus unsuitable for tackling today's problems of inflation and shortages. (John May-nard Keynes pioneered the use of gov-ernment fiscal and monetary policies. including deficit spending, as tools to combat the business cycle.)

"There's a lot we don't know," says Robert Gordon, professor of economics at the University of California at Berkeley, Prof. Gordon, who is president-elect of the American Economics Association, declares: "Find mc an economist who can explain the causes of the current surge of inflation and cure it without massive unemployment, and I'd like to meet him.

Accordingly, classroom instructors are starting to emphasize that they do not have all the answers. We'll stress the hamility we must have about the cur-rent problems we're in," says Prof. Burton Malkiel, who teaches introductory economies at Princeton. Prof. Richard Lebin, in charge of the introductory course at Yale, feels the same way.

He says: "The dawning on economists that their stories didn't explain everything probably came a lot later to economists than to students, who realized all problems weren't explained so easily. But it took major economic problems rather than the questions of a few students to change us."

The most obvious of those problems is the nature of today's inflation. In the ideal textbook world of a short while back, prices rose and fell in response to competitive pressures, and inflation was due to excess demand. Real life is considerably more complicated than that.

Economics professors have long recognized that fact and taught it. But today, when, for example, beef prices are high in the store and low on the farm, the professors are putting even more stress than they used to on such institutional pricing factors as labor unions and retail chains.

"Under Keypes's influence, we've de veloped a theory of aggregate demand but haven't even started to develop a but haven't even started to develop a theory of aggregate supply"—all the elements influencing a supplier's ask-ing price—says Prof. Gordon. "Every forecaster under the sun was off in his projections of prices for 1974."

The company said that Mr. Crilly had resigned as a com-pany director and that his administrative duties were being transferred, although he will continue as an officer to com-plete pending business. It was latest in a series of highlevel executive changes at Pan Am and it was reminiscent of the situation when Mr. Seawell took over 30 months ago from his ousted predecessor, Najeeb Halaby. At that time, an aide to Mr. Seawell characterized the company's executive suite during Mr. Najeeb's last months as a "revolving door."

Personality Clash

Mr. Crilly had been widely expected until a year ago to take over the title of president from Mr. Seawell. But last fall he was demoted from second to what amounted to third position in the company beneath James Leet, another executive vice-presi-dent. Company insiders attribut-ed his full largely to a personality clash with Mr. Seawell.

FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES

Car Sales Rebound in U.S. New car sales, down by 20 per cent or more all year, regained some of the lost ground in August, although domestic dealers still reported deliveries were off 2.8 per cent for the month. However, some car and truck makers reported records in the month, and industry analysts noted that sales for the month of 667,237 were only 18,123 units below the all-time high for August of 685,360 domestic sales set a year ago. "It has been almost a year since sales for a month came this close to matching the 1973 records," says one analyst. The 1974 model sales decline began last October, when deliveries were off 11 per cent. Analysts say one reason sales were on the rebound is that apparently many buyers are snapping up 1974 models to beat the $400-plus price rises on the 1975 models. Car importers, whose sales have been off about 25 per cent this year, also fared better last month. Their sales were estimated at 140,000, off 7.5 per cent from August, 1978. Their market share was also up to 17.3 per cent, but still below the 18.1 per cent of last August.

Chrysler Plans Price Increases Cirrysler says it will have to raise prices several times during the 1975 model year on top of an expected $400 to $500 introductory price boost this fall. Company chairman Lynn Townsend says there will be 'repricing, probably several times, during the model year" as long as costs continue to rise. Unlike General Motors and Ford, Chrysler has not said exactly how much it plans to raise prices this fall, but Mr. Townsend says the boost will be "right the ballpark" with the firm's two chief competitors. GM's increase will be a record $446, or 9 per cent, on new models. Ford has set a tentative $418, or 8 per cent, increase on its 1975 models.

Japan Seeks New TriStar Engine Japan's Transport Minister, Masatoshi To-kunaga, says lie will insist that All-Nippon Airways' grounded Lockheed TriStar airliners be fitted with new engines before they fly again. He told a press conference he will not permit the use of old models of the Rolls Royce RBengines similar to those which developed faults in two of the domestic airline's fleet of six TriStars. The fleet was grounded following emergency landings by the two airliners in the past week. Each suffered oil loss through cracks in the cast alloy outer casing of two of the three engines.

Swiss Prices Steady BERNE, Sept. 8 (Reuters).— The Swiss wholesale price index at the end of August was unchanged from July but was 17.2 per cent higher than August last year at 153.5.

from commercial banks instead. Since midyear, for example, utilities have increased loans from New York banks by an estimated $580 million, more than twice the $212 million expansion in such loans in the correspond-ing period of 1973. Total business loans since midvear have risen about $1.71 billion this year compared with $736 million a

The New York Fed also reported a record amount of borrowing by commercial banks from Federal Reserve banks through-out the country; a decline in the money supply and continued slowdown in its growth rates, and a general decline in money interest retes that brought the federal funds rate to its lowest level since June 5. Money-market analysts a week earlier asserted that Federal Reserve activity recently had indicated a modest back-tracking in policy from the extreme restrictiveness that characterized its actions earlier this summer.

These same analysts view the Ped's decision Wednesday to reduce reserve requirements on longer-term certificates of deposit as a confirmation of such a shift. Yesterday's figures, however, seemed inconclusive, neither supporting nor detracting from the conclusion that the Fed had indeed modified its policy. Over the four weeks ended Aug. 28, the money supply has averaged $280.8 billion, up 5.4 per cent from a year earlier. This annual growth rate has been below 6 per cent for 10 weeks.

PROPHETS WITH HONOR

By Alan Barth. Knopf. 254 pp. $7.95.

Reviewed by Richard R. Lingeman

jurisprudence" of the Warren Court and the "strict constructionism" of the Burger Court (Whatever those labels really (William) Dennis case, which mean, if anything), the Supreme found the Communist party lead-Court as an institution has sustained a remarkable prestige in the last 20 years. With the auraof the presidency recently in eclipse and Congress receiving a 27 per cent positive grade in the polls, the judicial branch sails on seemingly stronger than everable to plunge most recently into the political thicket of the presidential transcripts case and emerge with nary a scratch. Certainly the court had (and has) its critics, and "Impeach Earl Warren" signs once rivaled the old Burma Shave signs as the nation's roadside reading. The Burger counterrevolution continues fitfully, and the recent busing decision backed off from suburban passions, while the obscenity decision catered to suburban souls. But overall, not since the early nineteen-fiftles has the court aroused profound sectional and ideological passions resulting in lonely interpositions by segregationist governors in schoolhouse

Whether this vague but widespread trust of the court is reflected in a greater interest in it. I don't know, but I would not be surprised to learn that it is rivaling the headquarters of the Federal Bureau of Investigation as a popular tourist stopping-off place in Washington. Those laypersons of a more serious bent who would like to learn more about one unique aspect of the court's modus operandi—and pick up a good anattering of legal history and theory in the bargain—are advised to read Alan Barth's "Prophets With Honor." Mr. Barth. who was an editorial writer with The Washington Post for 30 years, has focused on the role of dissenting justices in the decision-making process. Specifically, he has loaded his dice even more by limiting himself to landmark dissents whose thrust was in a later time adopted by a majority of the court. Thus he gives us Justice John M. Harlan's lone dissent in Plessy v. Ferguson, in which the majority laid down the doctrine of separate but equal that Brown v Board of Education would overturn 58 years later; Justice Louis D. Brandels in Olmstead v United States, a wiretapping case of the nineteen-twenties, enun-cisting the right to be left alone": Justice Hugo Black in Betts v. Brady, which denied right to counsel and was overruled in Gideon v. Wainright, and Justice Black again in Colegrove v. Green, which held that the Court could not interfere where the state had unequally apportioned electoral districts, overruled in Baker v. Carr, the "one man, one vote" decision: Justice Harlan Fiske Stone dissenting in the first Jehovah's Witness flag

THROUGH all the "sociological salute case, overturned only three years later in wartime; and Jus-tice William O. Douglas defending freedom of speech in the (William) Dennis case, which ership guilty of violating the Smith Act at the height of the cold war. A dissent, says Mr. Barth, is "a homogenizing a variety of views. Most dissents do not achieve immortality as prophecy but some, as Mr. Barth's book attests, have survived on the strength of their moral and intellectual authority, walting for vindication in a more hospitable future. Some achieve immortality, such as Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes's dissent in Gitlow, which stated the "clear and present danger" testa test that has been used both to defend and penalize speech-and Justice Brandeis's articulation in Ohnstead of the right to privacy, perhaps the quintessen-tial 20th-century right, truly prophetic of the new technology of snooping. Justice Harlan saying in Plessy v. Ferguson that the Constitution was color-blind, in 1896, was even more of a voice crying out in the wilderness; it took six decades of black history, laid out finally in dry, footnoted sociological facts, to prove that separate was unequal.

Mr. Barth pays exemplary at-tention to the facts and history of the cases. Swirling through his pages are the judicial doctrines that first-year law students learn in Con Law-Justice Felix Frank-furter's judicial restraint, Justice Black's incorporation of the Bill of Rights into the 14th Amendment, and others less attributable. The issues, legal, social and philosophical, are given a thorough airing.
.Where Mr. Barth falls short,

I think, is in pulling out any cohering strands common to this group of cases (all involving civil rights); it struck me, for example, that they all turned on federal, that is, Supreme Court, intervention on behalf of the individual against a local sovereignty. Justice Frankfurter's eloquent, sinuous reasoning be-comes the true "villain" of the piece, whether he is erecting "political thickets" or substituting the sanctity of the legislature's right to legislate, so long as it claimed the faintest reason for its action, for the outmoded state's rights of Plessy. None of Frankfurter's dire forebodings about the court's dissipating its moral capital have come true: indeed it has been just the opposite-at least so far as these cases are concerned. So Mr. Barth has another prophet in his book; one not without honor, but still a false one.

By James O. Dunaway

ROME, Sept. 6 (NYT) .- After nearly two years in sami-retire-ment, Valery Borzov is once again a serious contender for the title of world's fastest human, which he held after winning the 100meter and 200-meter dashes at the Olympic Gemes in Munich in 1972

The blond, 5-foot-11 1/2-inch 175-pound Ukrainian has managed, either by accident or design, to create something of an air of mystery about himself here. Wednesday he caused a stir by not showing up for his race in tha 200-meter heats. One rumor said he had gone sightseeing in Naples. Another said he had withdrawn because ha was afraid of being heaten by Pietro Mennea of Italy in the 200. In his first interview with a non-Soviet writer since the 1972 Olympics, Borzov was asked about his withdrawal and his plans, Some of his answers were in English but most of them were interpreted by Igor Ter-Ovanesyan, the Soviet coach and former long-jump star.

"No mystery," said Borsov, grinning. "Look, I have a great deal of respect for Mennea. I think I could have run 20,4 seconds or 20.5 here, but Mennes will probably run 203. I waited until after the 100 meters to decide about the 200 meters—and I deckled
